Bio

Pablo Sánchez is a DJ and producer hailing from Caracas, Venezuela. He moved to New York City in the early 2000s, immersing himself in the city's underground art/club scene and developing a lifelong affair with music that defines him to this very day. He began experimenting with music production, collaborating and performing live with other renowned artists such as Swedish producer Alexi Delano, with whom he later created the Basic Need project, still active to this day.

He is known for his thoroughly eclectic style of production as likely to be tailored to the dancefloor as to refreshing the spirit. His music have been released in a long list of respected outlets such as Culprit, liebe*detail, Sol Selectas, Hafendisko, Endless and Moodmusic records among many others.

He's been around the globe and back as a DJ, performing in places like Tokyo, Berlin, Sydney, Seoul or Moscow. He performed at Sonar festival on three occasions since moving to Barcelona, where he currently resides.

His latest productions include a string of EPs, remixes and collaborative projects, including a solo ambient album as Mutant Joy, and a remix of the late Venezuelan folk music legend Simon Díaz with his Basic Need project. He also runs his own record label Sisternoise records, continually releasing music from friends, well established and under the radar artists.

Pablo continues to be one of Venezuela's most respected electronic music exports, inspiring and captivating audiences globally with his unique approach to electronic music, whether he's performing at a major festival or a small club.

BASIC NEED

Ghost Clap

Basic Need is the new project from two of our music heroes - the Swedish producer Alexi Delano and Barcelona-based Pablo Sanchez. The pair cook up a spicy serving of underground house for hafendisko on the Ghost Clap EP.

'13 Years' rolls in via a deliciously squelchy bassline, offset with sharp strings and tripping, driving beats. It's a joyful dance-floor heater for late in the night.

'Ghost Clap' is cut from the same cloth, a low-slung groove, a sprinkling of sharp percussion, and a bleepy bassline are all the elements necessary to make this a hypnotic groover for the deeper end of the party.

Back in 2002 Delano and Sanchez already teamed up for a live electronic band in New York together with some Jazz musicians. Now the two follow up on their Basic Need debut (recently on Sevm Villas) with this fantastic Ghost Clap EP:

PABLO SÁNCHEZ DAYDREAM

Hailing from Caracas Venezuela, Pablo Sánchez has made his home in Barcelona, carving out an impressive reputation for exciting and eclectic productions and performances. Here, he drops a hugely impressive three tracker for Hamburg's hafendisko label.

'Daydream' is built around a throbbing groove. Thick, punchy kicks and snappy snares set the tone, before the bubbling, rolling baseline brings the propulsion. Spacey synths and shuffling percussion suggest a love of the more outer-fringes of disco and house, before the vocal drops to bring the whole track together.

Pablo Bolivar produces a crispy remix - tonnes of space and dynamism in the mix allows the elements to breathe and find their own function - the track explodes into life with a full throttle release of kinetic energy - sure to hit hard when deep into the more cosmic parts of the night.

'Mahari' is a finely crafted and slickly executed piece that exists in the same orbit as 'Daydream', but finds a different way to shine - pulsing synth tones and stuttering effects cast the vibe deep into space - one that will stick with the more international dancefloor troopers.
